SIX YOUNG MEN TO RECEIVE HABIT OF
THE HOLY TRINITY

Order Represented in U. S.
14 Years by Clergy at St. Ann's

REV. JENNE IN CHARGE

Ceremony Tomorrow Morning at St. Ann's Church,
Dorrance Street

Six young men will be clothed with the white woolen habit of the Order of the Most Holy Trinity tomorrow morning following the 10.30 mass at St. Ann's Church, Dorrance and Pond streets, by the Very Rev. Father Isidore of the Purity of Our Lady (Jenne), vicar provincial for the United States of the ancient order.

The young men who are to receive the habit of the Order and begin their year of probation or novitiate are: Kenneth G. D. Little, of Denver, Colorado, (Brother Thomas of the Five Wounds); Richard Linn Edsall, of Cambridge, Massachusetts, (Brother Joseph of Jesus Mary); Daniel Eldredge Goodhue, of Boston, Mass., (Brother Longinus of the Side of Jesus); George Vincent Cummings, of Morristown, N. J., (Brother Stephen of Christ the King); Peter Looman, of New York City, N. Y., (Brother Paul of Jesus); and William Raymond Ryan, of Morristown, N. J., (Brother Peter of the Precious Blood).

These young men together with Fr. Donatus of St. Mary, Fr. John of the Passion, and Brother Gaetan of St. Philomena, make up the personnel of the Friary of Saints John and Felix at Cornwells Heights, the most recent of all Trinitarian foundations, and the first formally erected house of the Order in the United States.

The history of the Order of the Most Holy Trinity, represented in the United States during the last 14 years by the clergy in charge of Saint Ann's Church, Bristol; Saint Michael of the Saints, Germantown, and Our Lady of Mount Carmel, Asbury Park, recites a long and brilliant record: It was founded in 1198 by Saint John of Matha, a French nobleman, and Saint Felix of Valois, heir to the French crown. John of Matha, a doctor of theology in the Sorbonne University at Paris, while offering for the first time the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, fell into an ecstasy, during which he saw an angel, clothed in white and bearing on his breast a cross of red and blue, in the act of liberating two slaves, one a negro and the other a white captive. He recognized the call of God to found a religious order which should devote its whole energy and its every means to this preeminent Christian work: The redemption of captives from spiritual danger and bondage and from actual physical slavery.

REFUSED A SEAT

The U. S. Senate yesterday afternoon refused Senator-Elect William S. Vare a seat in that body by a vote of 56 to 30.

MAY APPOIN SENATOR

HARRISBURG, Dec. 10 (I.N.S.)—Pennsylvania was without proper representation in the United States Senate today for the first time since 1900, through the exclusion of Sen. William S. Vare.

Records show that on six other occasions Pennsylvania has had but one Senator in the national legislative body, but never before was a Senator from this state excluded after being certified to the Senate as having been duly elected.

In April, 1900, the Senate decided that Matthew Stanley Quay was not entitled to his seat. The late Sen. Boise Penrose then served as Pennsylvania's sole Senator until Quay presented credentials which the Senate deemed acceptable the following year. That was the last time the State's representation was interrupted until yesterday.

While Vare issued a statement in Washington, criticizing the Senate's action, Gov. John S. Fisher, upon whom would fall the task of appointing a successor to the Philadelphia Senator if he is definitely ousted next spring, remained silent.

WOMAN SUES BECAUSE HORSE SHE PURCHASED AS "GENTLE, QUIET ANIMAL"
TURNED OUT TO BE "TOO FULL OF PEP"

"Peter Star," A Game Trotter, Should Have Been Named
"Dynamite," Is the Opinion of Many — Woman Wanted
Horse As Gift for Niece, She Says, for Birthday Present

DISPOSITION OF CASES

Frank Swaner, of Philadelphia: Charge, operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor; verdict, not guilty but directed to pay the costs.

Anthony Gallinas, of Philadelphia: Charge, operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor; pleaded guilty; sentenced to pay a fine of $200 and costs.

William Lintz, of Frankford: Charge, aggravated assault and battery and assault and battery; verdict, not guilty, and the prosecutor, Alois Stachel, of Doylestown, directed to pay the costs.

John W. Moore, of Dublin: Charge, false pretense; verdict, not guilty and costs divided between defendant and the prosecutor, Anna Strohmeier, of Atlantic City.

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 10.—Yesterday was "race horse" day in Quarter Session Court No. 1 when a Dublin farmer was tried and acquitted of a charge of false pretense for selling "a gentle, quiet and easily ridden horse" to a lady who later had him arrested when she said she found the horse to be "too full of pep and anything but gentle."

"Peter Star," a game trotter, who was purchased by John W. Moore, the defendant in the case, at a Doylestown horse bazaar twenty months ago, was the horse that caused the court trial yesterday.

Witnesses inferred that "Dynamite" would have been a more appropriate name for "Peter Star."

Anna Strohmeier, of 5103 Atlantic avenue, Atlantic City, the prosecutrix in the case, was called as the first Commonwealth witness. She told the jury, several members of which are owners or at one time owned race horses, that she came up to Bucks county to purchase a "quiet and gentle" horse for a birthday present for her 12-year-old niece who was visiting at "Idle Creek Farm," near Perkaskie. The farm is occupied by Henry Balzell and his wife. The little girl lives in Ohio.

The prosecutrix said that she went to the home of the defendant and purchased "Peter Star."

"I was informed by Mr. Moore that the horse was 'gentle, quiet and could easily be ridden by my 12-year-old niece,' said the prosecutrix.

"I paid $125 for the horse, and behold me, the horse was anything but gentle, quiet and easily ridden. It was wild and side-stepped all the time. Moore informed me that was because the horse had been in the stable for some time.

"I made a demand for the return of the $125 and I also offered to return the horse.

"Why, that horse would never stop.

"I paid for the horse in two checks, one for $25 and the other for $100. The larger check was dated four days later than the first check.

"Why, Mr. Moore even wept, out they were tears of joy, when he got rid of the horse."

Henry Balzell was the next witness. He is a brother-in-law of the prosecutrix.

"The horse was absolutely unmanageable," testified Mr. Balzell. "He ran away with me twice and on the third occasion when I tried to ride him, he would not move. He is a practical horse in the stable but goes crazy when he is taken outside."

Mrs. Balzell, wife of the owner of "Idle Creek Farm," testified that Moore told her he could not afford to keep the horse and wanted to sell him and that he did cry when the horse was taken away.

"Moore told us that Peter Star was a race horse but that he did not pan out well on the track," Mrs. Balzell testified. "Moore told us the horse was just exactly the kind of a horse for a child to ride. Why, one of our 160-pound farm hands got on him and the horse went through the barn door up to his stall and if the boy would not have ducked, he would have been killed."

The Commonwealth then called Dr. H. Clayton Meyer, of Blooming Glen. "I was called to the Balzell farm four days after the horse had been purchased," the doctor said. "I saw the horse three or four times. The first time I saw the horse, he was stiff. I called again to look him over and he was in the field. The horse slipped his bridle and tossed up and down while two men were trying to hold him. The horse was positively not suitable for a 12-year-old girl to ride."

"This horse is a very good one. Of course he is not a plug, but he is too frisky for a child. He has too much pep."

"I suppose it is the type of horse the Prince of Wales rides, is it not?" asked Attorney Webster Achey, of Doylestown, counsel for Mr. Moore. The doctor made no answer to this question.

Elmer Meyers, of near Dublin, a neighbor of Moore, called for the Commonwealth, said that the horse might be developed into a good rider if worked and properly broken. The witness said the horse was not broken to ride when the prosecutrix purchased him.

Legion Invites Organizations
To Assist in This Project

TO MEET ON TUESDAY

The American Legion and several of the local community organizations will meet Tuesday evening to discuss plans for the community Christmas tree which is to be erected on the property of the Refiners' Oil Company, Pond street and the Highway.

The Legion committee, which handled the affair last year, mailed invitations during the early part of the week to several organizations here requesting that they attend a meeting on Tuesday evening.

No definite plans have been formulated for this year's celebration but it is presumed that it will take about the same form as the initial one did last year. On that occasion the tree was erected, lighted with colored lights and on Christmas eve the public was invited to gather at the tree and sing Christmas carols. There was a short address made on that occasion by the Rev. James J. Bingham, who was then pastor of the Methodist Church.

Inclement weather interfered with the program.

COUNCILMAN RATHKE
HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Struck by Automobile As He Crosses the State Highway

NOT SERIOUSLY HURT

While returning from his business duties at the Thomas L. Leedom mill, last evening, Councilman G. A. Rathke, of 819 Pond street, was hit by a passing automobile, thrown down, and narrowly escaped serious injury.

Rathke, who was on foot, was crossing at the intersection of Washington street and the Highway, when a car driven by James Sackville, who had, upon the change of signals of the highway lights, just started his car, and being blinded by the lights of a parked automobile standing at the corner, struck the pedestrian a glancing blow, throwing him down in such a position that his face was in the gutter and his legs immediately in front of the front wheels of the car.

The boy alongside the driver shouted a warning to Sackville to stop, which he was able to do quickly because of having his car under control, and, just in time, averted having the vehicle run over Rathke's body.

Mr. Sackville aided his victim and summoned a physician.

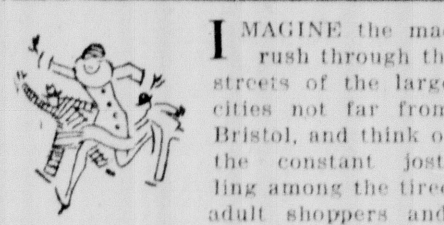

The Councilman today was resting from his near catastrophe and was badly shaken up and bruised, but no bones were broken.

MAD RUSH OF CROWDS THRU
STREETS NOT EXPERIENCED
HERE BY "GIFT SEEKER"

Constant Jostling In the Larger Cities Tires Shoppers
Early In the Day — This Trouble Eliminated
Here, and Arrays of Gifts Are Excellent

By "GIFT SEEKER"

I MEDIATELY imagine the mad rush through the streets of the large cities not far from Bristol, and think of the constant jostling among the tired adult shoppers and the tots anxious to see Santa, and then you will know the reason why those who purchase their gifts right here in Bristol are so soon finished. Those who haven't availed themselves of the opportunity of seeing the lovely things I have seen on the many counters and in the show-windows as I've been going through my list, have missed a lot. Right here I want to say "Three cheers for the wide-awake Bristol merchants!"

As I have been wandering about, sometimes pondering over whether to buy this or that, I have also overstepped the bounds and picked out in my mind just what I want others to buy. Of course I wouldn't tell them. But for Dad's present to the family I have the very thing. It is one of those lovely Radiolas that are displayed in Thomas Profy's window. The one I like best has a sturdy two-tone walnut case, and is slightly less than four feet high. I know "the family" will second the motion, and I do so like the reception on these machines.

It seems to me I thought and thought for hours when I came to the name of Martha's baby on the list. But I needn't have been a bit worried, for as I happened to glance in the window at J. Maffo & Sons store, on Mill street, yesterday afternoon, I saw something that I knew would be satisfactory—a pair of very light tan baby shoes. The baby is just learning to walk, and the shoes I bought have stiff soles. The leather in the uppers is so soft and pliable, and I just know they will look nice when she's "all dressed up."

I don't know whether it was the fine appearance of the show windows or the lovely group of articles in them that drew my attention to Vandegrift's Men's Shop, Pond and Mill streets. But the window does look tempting with its color scheme of green and red. Then, too, all over the glass there are snow drops, fashioned of cotton. I was able to secure one of the warmest hothouses for Dad there. Dad likes brown so much, and this

ALLEGED ATTEMPT TO KIDNAP EDGELY
YOUTH MADE IN PHILADELPHIA AS THE LAD WAS ENROUTE TO SCHOOL THERE

John L. Hibbs, Jr., 13, Ran from Kidnappers to Friends Select School and Reported the Incident — Police and School
Authorities Are Making An Investigation

What is alleged to have been a daring attempt at kidnapping was experienced by an Edgely boy, according to the Philadelphia police, who late yesterday made the facts in the case public and began a rigid investigation.

The lad concerned is John L. Hibbs, Jr., 13, of Edgely, and son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Hibbs, of Edgely. Young Hibbs, who is a well developed child for his age, commutes daily to Philadelphia, where he attends the Friends Select School. He arrives in Philadelphia a trifle late for school each day due to the train schedule.

It was Thursday morning at about 9.10 that the alleged kidnapping incident occurred. Young Hibbs was walking from the station to the school and was at 17th street and Parkway, when he says a car drove up alongside the curb with a woman at the wheel and a man in the rear.

"When the car stopped the woman leaned over the side of the machine and said: 'Come and take a little ride with us, my boy.' I didn't answer. Then the man in the back seat opened the door nearest me and said: 'Yes, get in and take a ride with us. We'll drive you wherever you're going.'"

"Mother and father had often told me how Charley Ross was kidnapped here in Philadelphia when he was a boy and was never heard of again—and that's the first thing that entered my mind.

"I told them I didn't care to take a ride and that my school was just a block or so away, but they got angry when I refused and both started to get out of the car.

"Oh, you won't, eh?" the man cried, springing at me. 'We'll see about that.'"

"The woman sprang at me, too. I was too surprised to move and then I was terrified. But just before they reached where I was standing I started to run like mad.

"I ran to the school and one of the doors was open. I didn't look back to see if they were following me or not.

I was in too big a hurry to get to some safe place."

Mrs. Hibbs, mother of the child said last night that the incident was reported to the school authorities as a matter of protection for the other children who attend the institution. "The police in the vicinity of the school were informed," said Mrs. Hibbs.

No idea for the cause of such an attempt could be given by Mrs. Hibbs in discussing the case, last night. "We have no enemies that we know of who would do such a thing."

The terrified boy ran to the office of Walter Haviland, headmaster of the Friends' Select School, and told what had occurred.

The automobile, the boy said, carried license tags which he believed were from New York. He was positive they were not Pennsylvania or New Jersey tags.

The attempted kidnapping was reported to police yesterday afternoon by Otto F. Schoder, silk dealer, of Philadelphia and the boy's uncle. Magistrate Hibbs said he knew of no enemies who would have tried to kidnap his son. City Hall police notified stations throughout the city and suburbs and fliers were sent out giving a description of the car and its occupants.

The Hibbs family lives on Riverside avenue, in Edgely, where Magistrate Hibbs has held office two years. His son is in the seventh grade at the Friends' Select School and rides into Philadelphia on the train each morning with Mr. Schoder.

RIVERSIDE THEATRE

When Universal hired an animal trainer to manage the many ferocious jungle beasts used in the thrilling chapter-play "The Trail of the Tiger" which is playing at the Riverside Theatre weekly beginning today, they selected Charles Bernard Murphy.

It was his duty to protect Jack Dougherty, the star, Frances Teague, feminine lead, and Henry Mac Rae, director, as well as all others on the set from possible harm from his wild animals.

Murphy was well qualified for this trust for he has been training animals all his life. He is a scrapping Irishman with a soft heart and a consuming love for animals, who obey him implicitly.

Nearly thirty years ago he was with a circus as an assistant animal trainer. For a while he was a barker for the sideshows and then trained two tigers so they would dance with him. He eventually entered vaudeville as Carlos Bernardo under which name he is known throughout the world.

After his vaudeville engagement was ended he returned to the circus and when Carl Laemmle decided to establish a zoo on the Universal lot for use in motion pictures Murphy was picked for the job.

His experiences in motion pictures have been far more thrilling and dangerous than his work in circuses, for animals object to doing the same stunt over more than once in several hours.

The animals used in Universal's circus-Western serial include 28 lions of varying ages, 4 leopards, 3 tigers, 2 camels, 2 elephants, 20 monkeys, 2 black bears, an orangoutang and several wolves and foxes.

Murphy has received but one severe injury in his career. An elephant crushed his ribs and put him in the hospital for seven months.

The supporting cast of "The Trail of the Tiger" includes such people as Jack Mower, Jack Richardson, John Webb Dillon, Frank Ellis, and others.

CONGRESS' OPPORTUNITY

A new congress always stirs fresh hope in the people of the United States. Some voters and taxpayers have acquired, and with reason, a low view of the performance of some congresses in the past, but the whole nation still has a profound belief in representative government and looks for better things from the present session.

The new house of representatives may produce some men of promise, and, by prompt and intelligent dispatch of the public business, do something to reclaim prestige for congress as a whole. There is always a good chance for reform in the lower branch of congress, whose membership is as changeable as the winds.

There is not the same hope for the senate. Its members are elected for a longer and are more often returned for a second and even a third and fourth term. It is a continuous body, and is too apt to continue in practices which have wearied or disgusted the country. This danger is more than ordinarily imminent this year because the senate now sitting is without a real working majority in either party and without a vigorous leadership or control.

One source of trouble in the senate seems to have been removed by the truce between the conservative and radical Republicans. Apparently the "gentlemen of the left" are in a less militant mood than in some preceding sessions. The insurgent bloc of Middle Westerners has wandered back into the fold, but its acceptance of committee places does not necessarily mean it will abandon pet issues and support every administration measure.

There must be debates, differences of opinion, and diversity of interest in the seventieth congress, but party politics and sectionalism should play no part in deliberations of the national legislative body. This will be a memorable congress if every member remembers that he is making laws for all the people and spending the money of all the people, and acts accordingly.

WHY ADVERTISED GOODS SELL

There are many reasons why advertised goods sell best. In speaking of nationally advertised goods, for example, travelers are able to purchase the same brand of cracker in the East as in the West, in the North as in the South—and all of them are equally good and crisp.

And the same principles apply to all merchandise and goods made or sold locally. The buyer knows that a local advertiser is ready to stand behind his product because his advertising is proof of his confidence.

The advertiser is known and has pledged himself to stand back of his merchandise. He has given his printed word to the general public and must keep it. It is the mark of good faith and is recognized by buyers the world over as such.

Almost without exception, all of the improvements in packages, or other containers have been the direct outcome of advertising.

The people who can't read are at least spared the sub-titles.

Because it takes it all to live on in sunny days few men can save anything for the rainy ones.

Our idea of the ultimate in extravagant precaution is forty dollars' worth of lightning rods on a ten dollar barn.

An Irishman applied for a job at the gas works.

"What can you do?" asked the foreman.

"Almost anything, sor," said the Irishman.

"Well," said the foreman, who was a bird of a joker, "you seem to be all right. Could you wheel out a barrel of smoke?"

"Sure, fill it up for me."

There are two sides to every question and when two men wager to prove they are right—one is a fool.

Greene: "Retired, eh?"

WHEN A MAN LOVES

By ALLIE LOWE MILES

SYNOPSIS
Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescart, beautiful orphan, whose rascally brother, realizing her worldly value, barter her to Ravoit, rich connoisseur of women. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris. Manon's brother steals her for Ravoit. Circumstances force her to surrender to Ravoit. Fabien, thinking her perfidious, returns to his studies. But Manon seeks him, explains, and they go to Paris again, where they live in dreamlike splendor.

"Oh, Lord!" ejaculated Fabien. "You will have to pardon me, my dear. I will return when I do not have to share you with so many." Fabien hurried to Manon's side and kissed her finger tips gallantly.

"Wait!" she commanded gaily. "Help me up first." Fabien lifted her to the side of the great bed. "Thank you—no, don't go yet—my slippers next!" She extended bare, pink little feet and as Fabien fitted on her satin slippers she bent over and kissed him provokingly on the forehead. Turning away with a laugh, before he could imprison her hands, she began struggling into a filmy negligee. Fabien came to the rescue and wrapped her lovely figure in its fragrant folds.

"Now, my lady, will you descend?" he inquired with mock dignity, offering his hand. Manon was the most absorbed spectator of the little scene. She had wandered about the great house trying to settle upon some way to handle the pressing need for money. His father had disowned him. Tiberge was still friendly and compassionate, but his means were limited, and even if he gave up all he had it would not be sufficient to meet their extravagant mode of living. It did not occur to Fabien to live simply, because Manon's nature demanded luxuries and amusement and he felt that he should be man enough to provide them for her. Also, he loved her in the gay happy moods that were hers in the midst of their present surroundings and some way, some how, he was determined to provide all that her pleasure loving nature craved.

Fabien had not settled on any definite financial plan when he recalled Manon's request to "come back very soon." He returned to her boudoir and chanced to arrive at the open door just as she was showing her necklace. Fabien remained outside, a look of comic dismay on his worried face.

A few days before Manon had described the jewel to him with such enthusiasm that he could not resist surprising her with it as a gift. No one knew better than he how ill he could afford the indulgence. But when he saw what a beautiful picture she made in its reflected glory he did not regret the extravagance. The incident only drove home the fact that he must raise money—a quantity of money—before many more days passed into eternity and carried him along in a hopeless maze of bills and insistent bailiffs.

Fabien did not join the admiring throng gathered about Manon. He was about to enter when a servant quietly approached and said: "Monsieur, there are two gentlemen—in the drawing room who insist upon seeing Monsieur."

Fabien tried to put Manon out of his thoughts as he went downstairs to confront the two gentlemen. He knew only too well who they were and what they wanted. Their presence in his home was not welcome and he dreaded the consequences of the enforced interview.

CHAPTER XVI
When Fabien entered the drawing room he felt two pairs of piercing eyes centered upon him. The humiliation and annoyance that had been his before entering the door changed to an air of amused nonchalance. The situation did have an amusing side. Why not play up to it and ignore the danger involved? At least it would be a new and refreshing way to receive the callers.

"Good afternoon, gentlemen," Fabien bowed politely as though they were distinguished guests. "I had not expected to have the pleasure of receiving you again so soon!"

The two men plainly showed their surprise at this unexpected greeting and as a result the things they had intended saying came out in unintelligible sputters. One of them began searching his pockets for a paper that it was his duty to serve. Fabien saw the gesture and with an amused twinkle and deliberate misconception said:

"Won't you try some of mine?" offering his snuff box. "Perhaps you left yours at home."

"We didn't come here to take snuff with you—and you know it!" shouted the angry bailiff, at last finding his tongue.

Brown: "No, bought a used car."

"Eat onions in the winter," advises a physician. Yea, bo! Then, if you are lost in a fog, your friends will find you.

Beauty is the exterior upholstery that transfers a lunch-counter queen from a bathing suit into screen material.

When you make an appointment, be there on time or telegraph.

"Is he really dishonest?" "Why, if he'd been born with a silver spoon in his mouth, it would have had somebody else's initials on it."

Dishonesty: Paying installments on the car, making the grocer wait.

Woman Sues Because Horse Was "Too Full of Pep"

Moore, the defendant. "They took the horse on four days' trial. There was nothing said about the horse being safe for a 12-year-old girl to ride. They saw the horse go sideways before they bought him. The horse was not a saddle horse and I did not guarantee the horse, but I did say that if the horse was purchased and was broken in by one person, he would be safe.

"I bought the horse at the Fretz Bazaar in Doylestown. I did not say the horse was registered in the Red Book. I delivered the horse to the Balzell farm, riding him there.

"When I got there the little girl said 'Can I get on his back and ride him?' and I said, 'No, indeed you cannot.'

"I received two checks the same day for payment. One check was for $25 and dated August 9. The other check was for $100 and was dated August 14. I gave the woman four days' trial on the horse. The $25 was for me, whether she decided to take the horse or not. If she did not decide to keep the horse after four days, I was to return the $100 check and they were to bring the horse back. If I did not hear from them after four days the transaction was to be considered closed. On September 15, five weeks and three days later, a hired man from the Balzell farm came to my place and told me to come after the horse. I had cashed the checks on August 26, at a Doylestown bank.

"I did not cry tears of joy when they took the horse away, for it nearly broke my heart, but I had several horses and could not afford so many."

The jury deliberated less than twenty minutes and returned a verdict of not guilty but directed that the costs in the case be divided between the defendant and the prosecutrix, Anne Strohmeier, of Atlantic City. The costs amounted to about $40 apiece.

Members of the jury who served in the case were Albert S. Paxson, Langhorne; Arthur W. Blacker, Yardley; Samuel T. Lewis, Bensalem township; J. Morris Cornell, Southampton township; Joseph J. Mondeau, Bridgeton township; Edith Meyers, Plumstead township; Raymond Davis, Falls township; A. C. LaRue, Doylestown; John Marian, Bristol; Henry E. Ely, Doylestown; William H. Smyrl, Bristol township; and Harry Miller, Bristol.

Frank Sawner, of Philadelphia, was acquitted yesterday of operating an automobile while drunk in Bristol on August 22. Dr. Fox, of Bristol, who examined the defendant, testified that Sawner had been drinking but was not drunk, but that in his opinion anybody that had been drinking should not operate an automobile. The jury placed the costs on the defendant.

Sawner told the Court that he never drank whiskey but that he did have a drink of wine at a christening.

Anthony Gailinnas, of Philadelphia, pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Ryan in Court No. 1 of driving his automobile while drunk on the Old York Road on October 16, in Warwick township. He was arrested by Highway Patrol officers and examined by a Doylestown physician who pronounced him "under the influence of liquor." Gailinnas admitted that he had taken two glasses of cider and a glass of beer and that his car was in an accident and had broken down. He was stranded out in the country with his family. The Court sentenced the defendant to pay a fine of $200 and costs. Henry A. James, of Doylestown, represented Gailinnas.

In Court No. 2 before Judge Robert A. Stotz, of Easton, yesterday, a jury acquitted William Lintz, of Frankford, charged with aggravated assault and battery and assault and battery by automobile, and placed the costs on the prosecutor, Alois Stachel, of Doylestown. The defendant was represented by Isaac J. Vanartsdalen, of Doylestown, and the prosecution was in charge of John L. DuBois, Doylestown.

The action grew out of an automobile collision near Newtown when cars driven by the defendant and the prosecutor, collided, injuring occupants of the Stachel car. In the trial of the case it was brought out that civil suits are pending against Lintz as a result of the same accident.

The second week of criminal court will get started Monday. During the first week thirty-six cases were disposed of.
